

REGISTRATION AND AUCTION POLICY

Version 1.0

Period	Description	Duration	Trademark Claims Service
Sunrise Registration period	The Sunrise Registration period is a method of allocating domain names amongst trademark holders ("TMH") who have pre-registered their marks with the ICANN designated trademark clearing house ("TMCH"). For further information about how to pre-register in the TMCH, please visit: http://newgtlds.icann.org/en/about/trademark-clearinghouse/faqs The owner of a pre-registered mark ("PRM") will receive a list of domain names ("DNS List") which they will be permitted to apply for in the Sunrise Registration. The DNS List may also include Abuse DNLs¹. However, the strings on any DNS List are not unique to any PRM. Other TMHs may have the same domain names on their respective DNS List ("Contention Strings"). A TMH may not receive advanced notice about Contention Strings from TMCH. Subject to our Reserved Names Policy, a PRM TMH (and no other person or entity) will have the chance to apply for any available domain name according to their specific DNS List in the Sunrise Registration period. The Sunrise Registration period is the earliest possible period in which a PRM TMH is able to apply for any available string on the DNS List. The Sunrise Registration period lasts 60 days. At the end of Sunrise Registration period, if a PRM TMH applicant is the ONLY applicant, the name will be allocated to the PRM TMH at the end of the Sunrise Registration period, and will be registered to the PRM TMH in accordance with the details	60 days

¹ For further information, on Abuse DNLs please see: <http://newgtlds.icann.org/en/announcements-and-media/announcement-11oct13-en>
